The Use of Chain Armor in the British

From London Tid-Rits Setting aside at once all talk about protections that are perfectly bullet proof, I give you my assurance that an immens number of the officers of our army and navy who go on foreign service, especially when one of our "little wars" is expected, provide themselves with certain easily recognized protections.

These, mind you, are well-known articles of trade to the services. The commonest and most usual type of these protections consist of fine but beautifully tempered single chains, inclosed in soft leather, which run along the shoulders, down the outer side of the arms and over certain parts of the body. These can either be sewn into a particular tunic or they can be adjusted separately and put on like harness. Take it absolutely that hundreds upon hundreds of sets are sold. The most valuable of all chains, in connection with accounterments, are those which guard the head, and in cases where the regulation cap or helmet is not

are those which guard the head, and in cases where the regulation cap or helmet is not sufficiently protected in this way, specially made chains are sewn inside the same and covered by the lining.

Only those who have been in actual conflict know how valuable all the chains mentioned are in minimizing the effect of sword cuts. As regards protection from sword and bullet, the general belief of officers nowadays seems to be in thoroughly tanned leather, and great quantities of tight-fitting leather under-tunics are made for officers, the favorite pattern—said to be the invention of the late Sir Richard Burton—being that which forms a not too prominent ridge down the center of the chest. I have heard in numerable stories-from officers of bullets which have been diverted in some degree by which have been diverted in some degree by these leather tunics, some of which are lined with woven steel wire. Of course, none of these things are supposed to be an absolute protection, but only a sort of palliative.

NEWS OF LINCOLN'S DEATH.

In Illustration of the Improvement

From the London Daily News. Writing upon the subject of "The Romance of Our News Supply," Mr. W. G. Fitzgerald tells a story about the death of President Lincoln which strikingly illustrates the improvement effected in our neans of communication during the last thirty years. In those days there were no quent death had to come by steamer. All night after Wilkes Booth's fatal shot had been fired Reuter's agent at Washington waited for the announcement of Lincoln's death, which was known to be imminent. The President passed away at 7:30 the next morning at the very moment a great steamer was leaving for England. The energetic agent hired a fast tug and pursued the departing steamer until he was near enough to east or her the departing steamer until he was near enough to cast on her deck a tin canister containing the mournful tidings. This was the only intimation of Lincoln's death re-ceived in England by the mail. It was the custom in those days for writer custom in those days for swift yachts to meet the incoming Atlantic liners off the coast of Ireland. Tin cans of special con-struction were thrown overboard by the officers of the steamer and picked up by the yachts, after which the messages were conveyed with all possible expedition to the nearest telegraph office.

BATTLING WITH A RATFISH. A Queer Marine Monster Killed Off the California Coast.

From the San Francisco Examiner.

The Italian settlement at the foot of Franklin street, Oakland, was agitated re cently by the capture of a monster of the deep. An Italian fisherman gave battle to the queer fish, and he says he will long re member the encounter. The capture was made near Goat Island. It took several hours to land the fish, and during the contest two boats were nearly wrecked. The Italians call the monster a "ratfish," be cause it has somewhat the appearance of a rat. The fish weighs 245 pounds and measures eleven feet from the tip of the nose to the end of the tail. The tail itself, which was used by the fish as a means of de was used by the fish as a means of defense, measured six feet in length. The story of the battle was told by Lagoria. He employs the fishermen to go out every morning and fish for him.

"There is one old man in my employ," said Lagoria, "who seems to have particularly bad luck in catching freaks. Several days ago he caught a maneater while fishing near Goat Island, and had an exciting encounter. This morning the same old fisherman had his lines out near Goat Island when he captured the ratfish. He was alone at the time, and was somewhat excited when the monster came to the surface cited when the monster came to the surfac cited when the monster came to the surface of the water and made straight for his little boat, lashing his tail in all directions. The fisherman had to devote his efforts to getting away from his catch. He shouted for assistance, and three companions, who were fishing in the vicinity, came to his rescue. After a long struggle they succeeded in drowning the monster and towed rescue. After a long struggle they succeeded in drowning the monster and towed him ashore. A fish that weighs 245 pounds and is even eleven feet lorg, with a tail almost like a rod of iron, can do some fighting when it gets mad."

Chloroform's Effect on the Mind.

From the Londor Daily News.
"I dare say many of us," said Sir James Crichton Browne in his late lecture on ireamy mental states, "recollect the story of the professor who, having experienced a agnificent thought in the early stage of chloreform inhalation, resolved that he would by one bold sally lay hold of it and so read the riddle of the world. Having so read the riddle of the world. Having composed himself in his easy chair in his study, with writing materials at hand, he it haled the chloroform, felt the great thought evolve in his mind, roused himself for an instant, setzed the pen, wrote desperately he knew not what, for even as he did so he fell back unconscious. On coming to himself he turned eagerly to the paper, to find inscribed on it, in sprawling but legible characters, the secret of the universe in these words, 'A strong smell of turpentine pervades the whole.'"

Baby on the Stove.

Frem the Buffalo Express. A little daughter of Dominick Schrautz of Dunkirk, N. Y., was severely burned the other night. She was lying in a baby carriage alongside of the kitchen stove. Awaking during the night, the little one left the carriage and climbed onto the stove, which was quite hot, the parents having put enough coal in to last all night.

Mr. Schrautz was awakened by the cr'es of the child, and, rushing into the kitchen, he found her upon her hands and knees on top of the stove. He called his wife and summoned Dr. Beardsley, who dressed the child's burns. The skin on her hands and feet came off.

WOMEN AT THE FAIR

Distinguished Social Gatherings at Atlanta.

A LIST OF ENTERTAINMENTS

Georgetown Alumnae to Be Honored Next Week.

PRETTY FACES AND COSTUMES

Special Correspondence of The Evening Star. ATLANTA, Ga., October 17, 1895. The greatest social events of the exposition season will have transpired between the middle and last of October.

During the past week the Daughter of the American Revolution and the Colonial Dames of America held their congress in Atlanta. Next week President Cleveland and his cabinet, Mrs. Potter Palmer and the Chicago board of women managers and the Georgetown alumna will visit Atlanta.

The two patriotic orders of women who have been the guests of honor in Atlanta have every reason to be flattered by the attention shown them. On one afternoon Mrs. William Dickson, one of the leading Colonial Dames in the city, opened her house to the visitors and tendered them a beautiful reception. On the same even ing the resident Daughters of the Ameri can Revolution, the Colonial Dames and the board of women managers gave a ball in their honor at Concordia Club, one of the handsomest club rooms in the south, and on the next evening the Daughters of the Revolution in their turn entertained their hosts and hostesses with an historic play in compliment to them, which was given at the Grand Opera House, under the management of Miss Leper, regent for Pennsylvania. The ball at Concordia was led by Mrs. Joseph Thompson, president of the wcman's department, and well did she represent in her beauty and superb can Revolution, the Colonial Dames dent of the weman's department, and well did she represent in her beauty and superb costume the highest ideal of aristocratic loveliness. She wore a Marie Antoinette costume of opaque cloth of gold brocade over white satin, a wonderful shimmering toilet. In the laces of its bodice glittered many diamonds and a spray of the same precious stones raised upon her gold-brown hair.

Noted Women Present.

Mrs. John W. Foster of Washington. president general of the D. A. R.'s, was a handsome and distinguished figure on the occasion. Mrs. Donald McLean of New York, the beautiful regent from that state, was another prominent personage. Mrs. William Randolph Beale, regent of Virwas another prominent personage. Mrs. William Randolph Beale, regent of Virginia, was lovely in an elegant toilet, with her rippling auburn halr carried high on her head, like that in an old-fashioned portrait. Mrs. McDowell Wolfe, a bandsome

Ida Honore Grant. Atlanta matron and a direct descendant of Patrick Henry, was another prominent person present. From all parts of the south came the descendants of great ora-tors, soldiers and statesmen of the old tors, soldiers and statesmen of the old days, and among them a good representa-tion from all other parts of the country, the descendants of Puritans and cavallers mingling in one vast array of beauty. It is an interesting fact, by the way, to note that Mrs. Thompson herself, who is considered the typical southern woman, represents more than any other the race of both Puritan and cavaller, being or one side descended from the Perrins of South Carolina and on the other from the Golds of Fairfield, Conn.

The ball room at Concordia was magnificently decorated. The music was furnished by a Mexican band and the banquet served was one which has never been surnaged in the south passed in the south.

Five hundred invitations were issued for the play at the Grand Opera House under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Chapter of the D. A. R.'s. Distinguished Guests. On the 23d day of this month Mrs. Potter

Palmer and the Chicago board and representatives from the Georgetown alumnae will arrive in the city. Mrs. Palmer will be the guest of Mrs. Thompson's parents, Maj. and Mrs. Livingston Mims, during her visit. and in addition to the private entertainment which Mrs. Thompson will give in Mrs. Palmer's honor and that of the two organizations which she represents, a large reception and several other smaller affairs will be given. The fact that these two wo-

Columbia; Mrs. Victor Smith of Baltimore, Mrs. Nannie Gibson Baskin, vice president for Georgia; Mrs. Hattie Newcomer Gilpin of Baltimore, who presents to the convent every year a medal for music; Mrs. Russell Harrison, Mrs. Col. Fred Grant, Mrs. John B. Moran of Detroit and Mrs. Julius Walsh of St. Louis, two noted beauties; the Countess Overbeck, nee Romaine Goddard; Mrs. Gov. Grant, the handsome wife of the governor of Colorado, and many others.

Mrs. Lochrane Austell, a beautiful Atlanta woman, is the chairman for the reception and entertainment of the Georgetown alumnae. She is the daughter of the late Judge Lochrane, a great jurist and Irish gentleman. She is universally considered one of the most beautiful women in the south, and her manners are as charming as her face and figure.

It is odd, after all, to reflect upon the fact that those two great women leaders, together with many others who have made high places for themselves in the world, come from a school modest and conservative, where the gentle nuns make all the feminine arts and graces prominent in their training.

WASHINGTON THE PLACE.

Why Not Begin the New Century With a Great National Exposition? To the Editor of The Evening Star:

In the line of celebrations and expositions s it too early to suggest a national greeting to the twentieth century and Washing on city as the place where it should be held?

It seems fitting that an event that marks the closing of one century and opens up another cycle of time should be apropriate ly recognized by us as a nation in some manner that will permanently place or record, in monument and otherwise, a showing of the wonderful advancement in the arts and sciences and material progress that has marked the passing century, and that would serve as an incentive to further advances by the generations that shall folow in the coming one, Europeans often tell us we have nothing historic in America—none of the old world's time-scarred palaces, cathedrals and battlements. This is true. We are making history now—this suggestion is to have it recorded in enduring monuments at our rational capital, and the beginning of the year 1900 seems an opportune time to begin ear 1900 seems an opportune time to begin year 1900 seems an opportune time to begin the record.

Numberless suggestions might be made following the above, but I will only occupy your space to outline one of the many that have occurred to me.

Let the plan of the Columbian exposition at Chicago be followed in some measure in extending to every state and territory of the Union an invitation to erect in this city a suitable building of permanent character, a suitable building of permanent character, in which to maintain an exhibit of its productions in the mineral, vegetable and animal world, its manufactures and its educational systems, thus bringing to the attention of the visitor a comprehensive idea of the special productions and special advantages of each and every section of the

These state buildings in themselves should illustrate the colonial and the dominant styles of architecture at the time of their admission to the Union, or should in some memor commemorate events in their state history.

The United States exhibits are already in part provided for in the museums found in

The United States exhibits are already in part provided for in the museums found in the several department buildings, but, in addition to these and to give national character to the enterprise, a national hall of ample dimensions and monumental in design might be erected, in which each department of the government should place an exhibit showing advancements in its particular line, specially contrasting in each exhibit the state of the arts and sciences as they exist today, as against those of the year 1890 and the subsequent early years of the century.

State days might be set apart and days for the army and navy and labor and other great organizations, similar to the Columbian exposition, and the celebration run through sixty or ninety days or more. Of bian exposition, and the celebration run through sixty or ninety days or more. Of course, the national and state exhibits would remain permanently, but private exhibits and other attractions that might add to the interest of the occasion or the enjoyment of the visitor would remain only during the limit of the celebration.

There is sufficient enterprise among our own people, if assured of the success of such an exposition, to provide what is now so much needed, one or more mammoth halls in which meetings and public demonstrations may be held, and in the intervening years our present excellent hotel accommodations can be supplemented to any extent desired.

With five years ahead for preparation we need not be ashamed to invite the world to see what a republican form of government, with pluck, perseverance, inventive genius and industry of its citizens has accomplished in the century that has covered nearly the whole of our national life.

Do not imagine, Mr. Editor, because there are "millions in it," or millions will have to go into it, that the suggestion is too comprehensive or chimerical, for after seeing Chicago's never-to-be-forgotten "White City" the writer believes that the enterprise and patriotism of the people of the United States are equal to any undertaking, and that once started it will be a grand success.

CENTRAL UNION MISSION.

Eleventh Anniversary Celebrated by Appropriate Services. The Central Union Mission celebrated Its eleventh anniversary yesterday by afternoon services at the mission building, and an evening mass meeting at the Mount Ver-non Place M. E. Church. It was a fair index of the appreciation in which the mission and its work is held by the citizens of this city that the church last evening was thronged with an immense audience, and many were unable to gain entrance to the edifice. Rev. E. D. Balley of the mission conducted the services, and Mr. G. W. Havell led the singing, assisted by the mission orchestra. A welcome to the gospel workers was extended it by Rev. Isaac W. Canter of the Mt. Vernon Church, after which reports of various departments of the mission were read. Mr. Balley referred to the embarrassment to the mission resulting from a lack of funds for building purposes, and stated that although $25,000 had passed through the treasurer's hands during the year, it was contributed and used in behalf of charity, and not one cent could be diverted into the building fund. that the church last evening was thronged ing fund.

A unique feature of the exercises was the testimonial service participated in by eenverts of the mission. Mr. Ironside, conductor of the Morristown, N. J., Mission, told of his coming to this city six years ago a miserable, dirty tramp, and he was befriended at the mission and converted. Since that time he has devoted himself entirely to work among those with whom he was formerly associated, and has now taken charge of a mission similar to that at which he took a new start in life. Many others who had been converted at the mission were eager to testify publicly to the good the institution had-been to them.

A number of city pastors were present and spoke of the feeling the churches had toward the mission, all of them recognizing it as a most useful agency for good in the community and tendering it their hearty sympathy and support. Some of the ministers who made brief talks were:

Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, D.D.; Rev. J. G. Butler, D.D.; Rev. L. T. Widerman, D. D.; Rev. A. W. Pitzer, D.D.; Rev. Charles A. Stakely, D.D., and Rev. Teunis S. Hamlin, D.D. A unique feature of the exercises was the

Coroner's Verdict on the Death of Frank Smith.

At the conclusion of the coroner's inquest held late Saturday afternoon, as stated in The Star, to determine the cause of death of Frank Smith, who was found unconscious on the Long bridge Thursday last and died twenty-four hours later at the Emergency Hospital, a verdict was returned to the effect that Smith came to his death from a blow administered by some unknown person. The jury added that, from the evidence, no one could be held resterday morning in Glenwood cemetery, as a telegram was received from the wife of the deceased, who is in Kentucky, stating that she was unable to take charge of the body. The clerks of the War Department raised the money to cover the expense of the funeral. It is possible that the remains may be taken to Kentucky later.

GETTING LICENSES.

Paragraph Which May Be a Pitfall for Some.

Chairman Johnson of the excise board his morning notified License Clerk Williams to call special attention of all applicants for liquor licenses to the fourth paragraph of the fourth section of the liquor act before signing their petition. This paragraph reads as follows: "A statement that the applicant is a citizen of the United States and not less than twenty-one years of age, and that such applicant has never since the passage of this act been adjudged guilty of violating the laws govern-judged guilty of violating the laws governing the sale of intoxicating liquors or laws for the prevention of gambling in the District of Columbia."

When it is considered that the inspector of licenses has a little list in which is recorded the violations of law he has noticed while on his tours of inspection, the matter has a serious aspect. This little list has carefully recorded in it all the convictions that have occurred during the year, as well as all violations of law that have skipped the notice of the police. If the applicant, after having his attention called to the paragraph subscribes to his petition under oath he subjects himself to a charge of perjury if the inspector has any record contrary thereto against him. The excise board gives all applicants an opportunity to appear before it and state what, if any, violations of the law they have been guilty of during the year, and it will take such action thereon in order that he may conscientiously subscribe to hat he may conscientiously subscribe to
